‘Decolonizing’ Inter-cultural and Citizenship Learning with International Students in Canada?
Exploring the Possibilities

Adam Perry & Rachael Bethune (St. Francis Xavier University)

With a focus on young people’s citizenship learning in combination with insights from recent theorizing in the area of land education, this presentation will explore the possibilities for decolonizing approaches to inter-cultural learning for international students in Canada. In this webinar we will present the findings from a series of participatory photography workshops we conducted as a part of a larger mixed-methods project that explores how informal and everyday pedagogies shape international students’ mobility decisions in the Atlantic Canadian province of Nova Scotia. Participants’ collaborative analysis of their own photographs reveal how everyday citizenship learning emerges from international students’ affective relationships to place in such a way that obscures how international education is implicated in processes of settler colonialism. In highlighting how participants’ sense of belonging is deeply implicated in their connections to place, we discuss opportunities for integrating international students in current initiatives to ‘decolonize’ the Canadian academy.
